

Finding A: The rational modulation of T-cell senescence would be a promising avenue for the treatment or prevention of diabetes.

Finding B: These suggest that T-cell senescence-mediated reprogramming of metabolic pathways may be associated with development of diabetes and its complications, as well as other aging-related diseases.

Which finding is more general?

☐ Finding A ☐ Finding B ☐ They are at the same level of generality

Move backward

Move forward